

Dear Parent,

You will not need me to tell you that the Prime Minister has just announced another strict national lockdown, which sadly includes the closure of schools. It is not a situation any of us wanted to face again but we must make the best of it and play our part in reducing the transmission of COVID. We are, at least, better prepared for delivering remote lessons this time around and will do our utmost to support your child's learning in the coming weeks.

Our primary schools opened fully today for all pupils. First of all, thank-you to parents who supported us with what had been a successful restart. However, our colleagues have not had the opportunity to plan for the new lockdown and will need some time tomorrow. Children of critical workers, vulnerable pupils (who have a social worker) and pupils with EHCPs and/or disabilities may continue to attend school and we will supervise them safely. Please note this may be a different experience from the one we offered during the March lockdown because more learning will now be offered online. It is likely we will provide access to a computer in school but arrangements will vary from school to school.

Your child's Headteacher will be in touch some time tomorrow to share details of how learning will be delivered.

Pupils eligible to attend school

Detailed guidance is available here:

Free school meals

We will need to see further advice from the government about providing free school meals. I hope we are able to offer vouchers again. Please contact your child's school if you are experiencing considerable hardship and will offer support or signpost where further help may be available.

There is still much for us to consider and we have not yet had a chance to see the government's detailed guidance. We will therefore continue to get in touch regularly over the coming days and weeks. However, I hope this letter gives you enough information to make arrangements for tomorrow.

I do hope we are able to welcome our children and young people back into our schools in the very near future. I know how disruptive this can be for families and how much pupils miss from being away from school. I can, however, repeat my assurance we will offer you and our pupils as much support as we can in these difficult times.

I hope you and your family remain safe and well in these challenging times.

Yours sincerely,

John McNally
